3 hours, your laptop, one job you actually hate. You leave with it running.

THE JOB YOU NAMED

Open to all tips, moving into a new business model and target audience.

What you walk out with

6 things, running, on your own machine. Not notes about how you might do it later.

1 A Project that knows your business

Your documents, numbers and standards, in one place that outlives the chat.

2 Live data

Your real email, drive or accounts — not a demo.

3 One real artefact

Built in the room, off your own numbers.

4 A skill that repeats your process

The job you do every month, captured once.

5 One job running on a schedule

The first thing that happens without you.

6 A 14-day call and a 30-day review

Because the room is only a third of it.

BRING

- A laptop and a charger
- One real, messy file from your business — not a tidy example
- Your logo, a couple of photos, an old deck or brochure if you have one
- Claude installed and signed in, with the workshop skill added

ONE RULE

You won't be asked to write code, open a terminal, or install anything beyond the app itself. If a step ever seems to need it, say so — it means we've taken a wrong turn, not that you've missed something.

The three hours

Roughly a quarter teaching, the rest you, doing it.

TIME		WHAT
10:00	12'	Setup and triage Logged in, everything working. Problems solved now, not at 11:30.
10:12	13'	Name the job Four jobs on the board. That list is the spine of the session.
10:25	20'	Briefing, not prompting Rewrite your worst prompt as a proper brief. Watch what changes.
10:45	30'	Build the business brain A real Project — your documents, your numbers, your standards.
11:15	15'	Break The café is downstairs.
11:30	30'	Point it at real data Connect your email, drive or accounts. Ask about your own numbers.
12:00	35'	Delegate the job Hand over the job you named. Get back something real.
12:35	15'	Make it repeat Turn what worked into a skill. Put it on a schedule.
12:50	10'	Commit and close One thing you'll do by Friday. We book the 14-day call here.

If you fall behind, get to 12:00. That's the block that makes the day worth it. Everything before it is setup and everything after it is making it repeat — but the middle is where you hand over a real job and get something back.

Briefing, not prompting

The single biggest difference between people who find this underwhelming and people who don't. A prompt asks for a thing. A brief says what you're trying to achieve and hands over what's needed to do it.

THE FIVE PARTS

- 1. The job. What you actually want done, and why it matters.
- 2. The context. Your business, your numbers, your constraints.
- 3. The material. The real file. Not a description of the file.
- 4. What good looks like. How you'd know it was done properly.
- 5. The format. A spreadsheet, a page, a document, an email.

WRITE YOUR WORST PROMPT HERE — THE ONE THAT GAVE YOU A DISAPPOINTING ANSWER.

NOW WRITE IT AS A BRIEF.

Does the subscription box actually work?

You have the direction — a R1,000 monthly box, Cape Town only. What you don't have yet is whether the numbers hold. So we build the model: what goes in the box, what it costs you, what's left, and what it really takes to get to a thousand subscribers. Then you change the assumptions until you find a version you believe.

WHAT IT NEEDS FROM YOU

- Your product list with prices, and roughly what each costs to make
- What delivery costs you per order today
- Your best guess at how many subscribers would cancel in a month
- Anything you've already written about the new direction — rough is fine

WHAT REPEATS AFTERWARDS

A monthly subscriber review — who joined, who left, where the run rate to a thousand stands.

WATCH FOR

You're running this one yourself, so work through the five steps on the next page in order — they're built to be done in sequence, and step 1 does more than it looks like it does. Don't take the plan on faith, including mine: change the price, change how often the box goes out, change what's in it. The version you land on should be one you argued yourself into.

NOTES — ASSUMPTIONS, NUMBERS, THINGS TO FIX LATER

Working through it

You're doing this on your own, so here are the five steps in order. Do them in order — step 1 does more than it looks like it does, and the whole thing rests on it. Each box is what to ask; the rest is you.

1 Build the box

“I'm putting together a R1,000 monthly subscription box. Here's what I sell and what it costs — help me fill the box.”

Keep going until it reaches R1,000. If you run out of things to put in before you get there, that is the finding. Sit with it.

2 Cost it

“Now add what each one costs me to make, plus packaging and delivery, and show me what's left per box.”

That number is your contribution per box. Everything else depends on it.

3 The engine

“If 5% of subscribers cancel every month, how many new ones do I need each month to reach 1,000 within a year?”

Then ask: what if churn were 3% instead? The difference is the most useful thing on this page.

4 Break it on purpose

“What if the box were R750? What if it went out every second month? What if I had four items at R250 instead of twelve?”

And one more, which is the one worth sitting with: what could go in the box that isn't a product?

5 Name the answer

“Given all of that, which version of this do I actually believe?”

Write it down. That's the version you build.

Before you leave

Most training evaporates inside a fortnight. This is the page that decides whether yours does.

THE ONE THING I'LL DO BY FRIDAY

WHAT I BUILT TODAY, AND WHERE IT LIVES

WHAT I'D BUILD NEXT, IF THIS WORKS

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

- Day 1 — your asset pack: Project template, the skill you built, my prompt library
- Day 14 — a 60-minute group call. One win and one blocker each. This is the call that decides whether it sticks
- Day 30 — a written review: what's working, what isn't, what's next

STUCK BETWEEN NOW AND THEN

Tell Claude what happened — it can fix most of it. If it can't, mail me. I'd rather hear about it on the Tuesday than at the 14-day call.
